President Lincoln willing that Jeff. Davis should Escape.

A correspondent of the Cincinneti Gazette, who is writing up some of the reminiscences of Sherman's campaign in North Carolina, is responsible for the following:

Gen. Sherman complained, and, doubtless, with some truth, if not justice, that the Government had never distinctly explained to him what policy it desired to have pursued. Tasked Mr. Lincoln explicitly, when I went to City Point, whether he wanted me to capture Jeff. Davis or let him escape, and in reply he told me a story.

That 'story' may now have a histoof many points of public policy: The tarme will be more like other peo-tell you, General, Mr. Lincoln was said to have begun. Fletch-war was committed, er, who had abused the power placed ed or explained. in his kands by ordering officer to remove, by force, Judge Dryden and Day from their sents upon the Supreme Bench. And they solemnly declared that this outrage upon the majesty of the law is not to placed in power shall be, by lawful means, ejecied from their places; and they pledged themselves not to rest nor slumber until, with all the ceremonials of criminal justice, sentence is passed upon these arch offenders.' .

A story is told of a hypochondriae gentleman of rank and fortune in Ireland, who fancies one of his legs is of one religion, and the other of another. He not unfrequently puts one of his unfortunate legs outside the bel to punish it for its religious errors.

Latest Opinion of the London Times.

We are an outspoken people, and make no secret of our conclusions, but there is nothing in those conclusions to which any citizen of the Union need object. We have been surprised at the abrupt extinction of the war, but not more so than the Americans themselves. Whatever may have been our speculations or sympathies, we rejoice that the work of carnage is at an end. We cordially reciprocate the expressions of amity which reach us from America, and shall not be disbelieved in our professions of desire for permanent peace. For the rest, we can only wait. We can see nothing of the future, nor will we pretend to believe that the revolution is over. On the contrary, we see that it is but half finished, and that America will certainly never again be the America of the past. But it may well be something better. The blot of slavery, at any rate, is effaced from its seil and one subject of contention is removed. The position, too, of each State of the Union in relation to the whole is new defined and established, if not improvrical value, and I give it, therefore, as ed. Then the people have burned Gen. Sherman said Mr. Lincola told truths and unlearned fallacies, besides it—only premising that it was a fa-vorite story with Mr. Lincoln, which war seldom fails to yield. We will not stop to measure the truth of this panegyric, but the very pretension is enough to show that the contest which can be so described was a mighty war and not a mean rebellion, and that the leaders of the South are not captured traitors, but conquered enemies.
